Don Quixote.—It is not generally known, that a long period intervened between the appearance of the first and second parts of Don Quixote. Cervantes, it is supposed, had no intention of continuing his work; but finding that some persons had published a spurious second part, he felt indignant; set fairly to work, and produced the second part, which completes the story of his hero. When young, I read the spurious edition in French. D'Israeli, who has given us in the Curiosities of Literature some anecdotes of the author and his work, makes no mention of the spurious second part; and it is therefore presumable that he was ignorant of its existence.

A Successful Appeal.—Bell, a Scotch bookseller in Philadelphia, who flourished during the revolutionary war, published a number of pamphlets and some books, which he sold at exorbitant prices. A person came into his store one day, and asked for a pamphlet of less than one hundred pages, for which Bell asked a hard dollar; whereas a hard half dollar would have been its full value. The person was surprised at the exorbitant demand, to which he made some objection. Bell took the pamphlet from the counter, and was about to place it on the shelf, saying, with a very pompous and significant air, "Sir, this book was made for gentlemen." This tickled the vanity of the purchaser, who, not to lose his claim to that proud title, threw down the dollar, and took up the pamphlet.

Manner and Matter.—Virgil's celebrated sentence, "Gratior est virtus veniens in corpore pulchro," applies to books as well as to human virtue and "the human face divine." There can be no doubt that a very elegant edition of a work will make incomparably more impression on the mind, than the same work, ill printed and on bad paper. The first time I ever was struck with this idea was at the sight of a splendid edition of that delightful work, the Economy of Human Life, adorned with elegant engraved vignettes and tail pieces; a work, of which, it is true, I always thought favorably;—but its beautiful morals made a much deeper impression on me, when I saw them in their court dress, "in corpore pulchro," than when they appeared in the dishabille in which I had been accustomed to behold them. The same idea often forcibly struck me afterwards—and on consulting a lady of a refined literary taste, she perfectly agreed in the theory. Whether, however, it is not merely fancy, may perhaps be questioned.

"Satisfaction."—Dean Swift had a quarrel with a pompous, pragmatical attorney, on whom he determined to have satisfaction by his pen. Accordingly he turned Æsop's fable of the apples and the ordure into verse—and when he came to the address of the latter to the former,

"How we apples swim," he subjoined—

"Thus at the bar, that booby Bettsworth, Tho' half a crown outpays his sweet's worth, Who knows of law, nor text, nor margin, Calls Singleton his brother Sergeant."

Singleton was a first-rate lawyer, who stood as high in Dublin as our Binneys and Sargents do here. Bettsworth, stung to the quick, went very pompously to Swift, and holding out the paper, asked him, with a menacing voice and gesture—"Sir, are you the author of this infamous attack on me?" "Sit down, sir," says Swift, very calmly—"do not be in a passion, but let me tell you a short story. When I was young, my dear father—heaven rest his soul!—seeing that I had a turn for scribbling, and fearful of the consequences, one day told me that he was afraid that propensity would some time or other bring me into trouble. 'And, my dear son,' added he, 'let me give you a piece of advice. Should any libellous matter appear in any newspaper, and any fool or knave call on you to demand whether or not you are the writer—say no;—and therefore, sir, I say no to you.' Bettsworth had no remedy, and went off grumbling—saying Swift was like one of his own vile Yahoos, besmearing people with his filth, and out of the reach of punishment.

Cardinal Wolsey. All who know any thing of his history, know that he was proud and ostentatious, and accustomed to the use of gorgeous costume, in which he piqued himself in outshining all the other courtiers of Henry VIII. One day, a prodigal nobleman, who was deeply in debt, and paid nobody, came into court in a dress, the splendor of which outshone that of Wolsey, who being piqued, addressed the nobleman, and said, "My Lord, it would be more commendable in you to pay your debts, than to lavish so much money on your dress." "May it please your reverence," replied the nobleman, "you are perfectly right; I humbly thank you for the hint, and now make a beginning, to show how I value your kind admonition. My father owed your deceased father a great for a calf's head: here is sixpence—let me have the change."

Old Clocks.—I love to contemplate an old clock—one of those relics of by-gone times, that come down to us wrapt in veneration—telling their tale of simple yet touching interest. How erect and prim it stands in your corner, like some faded specimen of maiden antiquity! Its face bears evident marks of beauty—beauty decayed, but not obliterated. It is plain that it has seen its best days, but equally evident is it that it was the pride and ornament of its day—unrivaled among its companions. How many eyes have watched the even tenor of its ways, as it moved on in the never-ending yet still beginning journey of the hours. Hours! aye, years have gone by, since that aged monitor of time first started on its course. And they who sat out with it in the morning of life, whose motions were as active, and whose principles of vitality, if that may be called so which animates a clock—were as strong—where are they? Do they yet linger in the walks of the village? Can they be seen under the old oak tree, or at the door of the cottage? I see them not there; yet there stands the old clock, clicking blithe and patiently as ever.—The voice and footsteps are silent of those who journeyed up with it to the full period of a good old age. A new race has sprung up, long and far removed from the other; and as they too watch the progress of the old clock, their hours are fleetly passing by, and time with them will soon be at a close. How impressive then the lesson taught by that old clock, and the simple inscription on its dial-plate—"Tempus fugit."

TUESDAY, AUGUST 5, 1834.

The New England Magazine for August has burst upon our astonished vision, blooming with political disquisition, budding with political biography, and bearing the bitter fruits of political debates. It must be a very pestilential season for literature—probably owing to the “removal.”

We had been wont to look upon this Magazine as the very Eden of Literature; but it is converted into the very bear-garden of politics.

“Some flowers of Eden it still inherits,
But the trail of the serpent is over them all.”

Surely if we go on at this rate, Literature and the Arts, like the Indians, will be glad to quit their “Gold Regions,” and go beyond the Mississippi! The Biography of Mr Webster, and a phrenological disquisition on the oratorical merits of McDuffly, McHuffy, McGraffy, and McNinney, may be all very well in their appropriate places; but we modestly think they have got into the wrong pen; and we were going to say, “we advise” but we presume on no such measure—we hope the proprietor will in future “lock it” against such intruders—notwithstanding what they say in New York against such an unchristian practice.

We take the liberty of making only a single remark on one of these articles; that is, we were very much surprised to find that Mr Webster’s “country owes a debt of gratitude to his public services, which it cannot easily repay.” “What is the gross amount?” (as Falstaff asked dame Quickly); and “which country, Bezonian?” (as he demanded of the Courier);—the Bank?—or Brother Jonathan? If the Bank, she will re-pay him 10 per cent; if Brother Jonathan, he will most surely “swear out,” since the limits are enlarged, before he pays a brass farthing; “we will take our oath of that;” we know Jonathan to the back-bone, and he never in his life would pay any patriot for heating his poker.

The rest of the contents of the Magazine are in keeping with its former high character; except that the political articles, “like mildewed ears, have blasted their wholesome brothers.”

No man can serve two masters, God and Mammon; much less two mistresses—Politics and Literature.

The Maine Bank Convention, recently assembled at Augusta, nominated the Bank’s man, Peleg Sprague, for Governor. Upon the return of the delegates to Portland, in the Steamboat Connecticut, they stopped, says the Portland Courier, “by invitation, at General King’s at Bath, where they were liberally served with a collation, an abundance of fruit, and choice old wine, which had been stowed away in the General’s cellar for twenty years, and was brought out to honor this signal movement of the whigs towards political independence.”

With all due deference to the undoubted purity of General King’s wine, we should be extremely happy to be informed whether it was imported during the operation of the non-intercourse act, in defiance of which it is more than suspected, he had “dealings with the enemy.”

The operation of inflating a balloon is very much like a political contest, where you see a man destined to rise, but surrounded by the toils of his foes, who think they have caught him fast in their “net,” they hold on upon it with both hands, till their fingers are blistered, and are finally obliged to quit their grasp; and at last try the “sand bags” of abuse, thinking still to weigh him down to the earth. “Hands speak for him;” and he tosses down their arguments upon their own heads, and mounts up like a Magician, in spite of all opposition!

The number of foreign arrivals into the port of Boston, from January 1 to July 31, 1834, was 652—during the corresponding time of last year, 595—increased of this year, 57.

The number of foreign clearances from January 1 to July 31, 1834, was 574.
During the same time last year, 516.
Increase over last year, 58.

Mr Durant is making preparations for another ascent—which will probably take place in the course of two or three weeks.

The Theatrical Managers of our city are busy in preparing for the coming season, which will commence in a very few weeks. Stars we expect in abundance, and every thing promises the most brilliant campaign ever known in this great town.

The August number of the Knickerbocker, for which Lilly, Watt, & Co. are agents, is exceedingly interesting.—If it maintains its present ability, it will soon have no rival on this side of the Pond.

A correspondent of the Bangor Republican complains of the conduct of the Captain, of the Steamboat Bangor, in a lengthy communication of a column.

Fire.—The Hartford Review says that the beautiful village of Weatherfield, in Connecticut, was on Wednesday afternoon last, visited by a destructive fire. It first broke out in the barn of Dr. Erasmus Cook, which, with all its contents, was consumed, and notwithstanding the exertion of the villagers, to extinguish it, it communicated to the adjacent buildings, and ten or twelve of various kinds were consumed, among which were the dwelling house owned by Dr. Cook, the house owned by Mr. R. Clapp, the dwelling house and store of Mrs. Levi Goodrich, the store of Mr. Osman Harrison, a barn, two store houses, and other out buildings belonging to James L. Belden. The buildings belonging to Messrs. Cook & Clapp, only were insured. Mr. Belden is said to have lost garden seeds to the amount of $800 which were deposited in his store the day previous to the fire.

Railroad Accident.—A slight accident happened on the Boston and Worcester Railroad on Saturday afternoon, from the carelessness of the driver of a team, employed to cart some materials for the railroad, in leaving his horses to graze by the side of the road near where it passes the county road in Newton. As the train was passing, at a reduced speed, to cross the road, the horses were started at the noise, and ran the cart back, until it struck one of the cars, the engine having passed. The consequence was that the cart was upset and broken, and the horses thrown down, but not materially injured. One of the railroad cars had the steps and one of the panels broken. No persons were injured, and the progress of the cars was not impeded.—Trans.

POLICE COURT.

John Thomas—a fine square built tar, with a complexion unequivocally black—was arrested for dangerous and disorderly conduct, in the night. In the language of the watchman, “he was pretty well drunk, and doubled his stitches rather considerably, in staggering down street, till he ran foul of a pump handle,” which he mistook for a handspike in a windlass, and he commenced yelling out, like a true sailor, when weighing anchor, “Ye-ho, heave away my hearties—there she comes—let her have it—all together—now, boys, one and all for the horns—”

“Fire in the main top,
Fire in the bow;
Fire on the gun deck;
Fire down below!”

The watchman, entertaining the notions of a land-lubber upon the subject of vocal music, thought that John’s nautical melody might not be considered a very desirable serenade by “bare polite,” and so requested him to bellow his jaw. “Bellow your own fly-trap, Mr Catchpole. Who made you captain,” responded Jack. “You’d better be civil, or else you’ll dance another kind of a tune than that, I tell ye now,” said the little man in “brief authority.”—“Talk to me about dancing, you white lobster! Why I hope to see the day that you’ll dance upon nothing, and not be able to whistle a jig for your own diversion.” The dander of the functionary was fairly up-raised by this kind wish, and the crackling notes of the rattle reverberated through the “stilly night,” till a reinforcement arrived to the scene of the altercation, and demonstrations were soon made to impress Jack, and carry him to the watch-house; but he stood, like the pillars of the U. S. Bank, “upon a stern defence,” and defied their threats till he was practically convinced of their power. He then made a feint to have a fit; but being coal black, he found it difficult to turn ashy pale, and a prompt cold water remedy liberally splashed upon his face and bosom, out of a horse bucket, was so much more unbecomingly to his habits, than an imprisonment, that he speedily agreed to get out of his convulsions, and toddle off to jail—like a good citizen. To this statement of facts, he replied:—“I was groggy, I know; but what I did, I don’t know, that’s a fact.”—Committed for want of bonds to keep the peace.

William Brodick—a perfect sans culotte, but with hair enough on his face and head, to make a suit of clothes—was hauled up, for stealing, in company with Charles Quade, a looking glass, coat, and a lot of spikes, from the cabin of the brig Hudson. The loafers were observed, one morning, to glide, like weasels, in under a pile of mahogany, on the wharf, by a merchant, who was one of those prejudiced beings, who believe external appearances to be the outward signs of the inward spiritual man, when such appearances are unfavorable. He therefore kept the track of the worthies, till they issued out at the opposite end of the pile, laden with their hidden spoils, which were recognized as belonging to the Hudson. In his eagerness to secure the stolen articles, he permitted the thieves to escape; but pointed them out on another occasion to an officer, who arrested them, and they now stand committed for trial at the Municipal Court.

For the Boston Morning Post.

Mr Greene—Your account of the Biddle banquet and the Figure Head, is well calculated to excite attention and thought among the people. The wooden image of the national executive, decapitated in its place of honor, and the severed head presented in a charger to the President of the U. S. Bank, surrounded by his money bubbles, must have been a quickening spectacle, and no doubt ministered bravely to the deep potations of the party.

But as a part only of the mysteries of the occasion have come to light, may we not be allowed to seek out and conjecture the residue? And, say we ask, that when, by reason of hard drinking, the lamps and candles seemed to burn blue, as it is said they are wont to do at all reveling wine-bibbers, how appeared to the vision of the gentlemen the head of the Figure Head, as it appeared stricken off, and helpless before them?—Did that appear blue also? Could not a wine stimulated fancy make it, for the moment, a real Jackson head, the very offender which conceived the hated Veto? And then we should like to know the usage it met with.

In that blue season did the heroes of the eternal opposition exult over it, as a helpless, subdued, and despised foe? Did they dance round it—hiss or howl at it—mock it with ribaldry or sarcasm? Did they spit at it, or, in fancy, pull the gray hairs? If so, we say, gentlemen, this is unseemly. What do you do in the literary emporium, the very focus of the nation’s civility and decency? And yet to what suspicions are you not obnoxious? For men will query, what had civil and sober citizens to do with that wooden fragment at a nocturnal banquet—in presence of the Money King, and with closed doors? And then, who were congregated there? Was the assemblage in keeping, and a fair epitome of the Bank party, Tariffite, and Nullifier in fraternal embrace—Hartford Conventionist, and Bank Whig, new guard and old guard, side by side, at the same festive board?

Now we know that Mark Anthony’s wife placed the dead head of Cicero in her lap, and stuck pins into that tongue, which could so slander her public-spirited and beneficent husband.

So, too, in our early Indian wars—the savages deemed it a good joke to kill a white minister, and place his body erect, where two roads met, with a bible in his hands. But we do not live in the times of the Cæsars—nor are our citizens prepared, we hope, even in thought, to copy the Indian example. Nevertheless, it behooves all to have a care—for even unhalloved fancies cannot be entertained with impunity. Bad thoughts always leave the mind worse than they find it.

On the whole, it is fair to conclude, that the Bankites have become familiar with the Scriptures as well as with the Currency—and that the case of the Jew Herod and the Baptist was before them. Biddle, like the former, was much incensed against the man who told him the truth. John warned the King of the Jews to let his brother’s wife alone, and the offended woman lady, resolved to have the prophet’s head, and we mark, that it was at a banquet before that prince and his nobles, and when they had drank deep, too, that she had her wish. The head was struck off in prison, to pacify her, and given to her dancing daughter in a charger, and the little damsel gave it to her mother, and who no doubt exulted, as the Bankites might, over the head of the Figure Head.

The Nashville Republican of July 19th, says:—“On Saturday, Lewis Bolt of Hardeman county, was killed by Chissum May; the latter has fled and a reward of $500 is offered by Wm. L. Duncan for his apprehension and O. C. May, who was accessory—Wm. Blackwood has been committed as being also an accessory. Particulars are not given.

Swicide.—James Lucas, second mate of the brig Elizabeth, of Boston, committed suicide on Friday in New York by taking laudanum. The cause was the finding his wife, on returning from his last voyage, living in a state of adultery with another man.

From the New York Evening Post.

Barnabas Bates, Esq.—A common complaint of political journals against those opposed to them is for a want of candor in stating such truths as make against the particular individuals or particular doctrines they espouse. There is, undoubtedly, much ground for this complaint on both sides, and it not unfrequently happens that it may be alleged with justice against persons of the greatest uprightness of character and motives.—In politics, and in all matters that strongly interest the feelings, the minds of men are liable to be darkened by prejudice, and prejudice sometimes leads them to pursue a course of great unfairness, without their being themselves at all aware of the practical dishonesty of their conduct. To some degree, indeed, almost all political journalists practice wilful unfairness. They take care to place their own side of a question before their readers in its best aspect, and that of their opponents in its worst. When Johnson was complimented on his report of Parliamentary speeches, he chuckled with glee as he answered, that he had indeed preserved the balance tolerably even, but had yet taken care to give the whigs the worst of the argument. It could hardly be expected that the conductors of partisan newspapers should altogether avoid a fault which the great English moralist acknowledged in terms of boasting.

But in cases where the characters of private individuals have been injured by premature and unfounded statements of party writers, one would suppose that the first opportunity afforded by an authentic refutation of such statements would be promptly embraced to correct the erroneous imputations. We are sorry to perceive that the opposition press of this city have not answered this reasonable expectation, in the case of a man against whom they all eagerly published injurious stories, every one of which has long since been positively and amply disproved by official statements, the authority of which no person will venture to impugn. We allude to Mr Barnabas Bates.

Our readers probably all remember, about the time when the Report of the Post Office Committee was presented to the Senate, what a torrent of accusation and invective was poured out against this individual from the opposition presses of this city. He was represented as having been a secret political agent of the Post Master General, employed at a prodigious rate of compensation, and paid with funds derived from a distant post office, and charged to a false account.—These stories were circulated in advance of the Post Office Report, and were afterwards found to be unsupported, even by the exaggerated and calumnious statements of the majority. The services rendered by Mr Bates were shown to have been legitimate, extensive, and valuable, and his compensation certainly not beyond that which any man of his activity, intelligence, and character, might reasonably demand for the toilsome and responsible trust which he discharged.

Several months have now elapsed since these stories were fabricated, and since the prompt official refutation of them appeared. But those who eagerly circulated the calumnies, have not thought proper to follow them by a statement of the truth. This is an instance of unfairness, effecting as it does the reputation of a respectable private citizen, (for a clerkship in the New York Post Office does not certainly deprive Mr Bates of the character and immunities of a private citizen) for which the natural zeal and prejudices of party afford no mitigation.

It is within the personal knowledge of the conductors of the opposition press in this city that the affairs of the New York Post Office have been conducted in the most satisfactory manner since Mr Bates was appointed to the situation which he holds in that office. It is within their knowledge that he is exceedingly vigilant, attentive, and courteous in the discharge of his duties. That he is ever ready to oblige citizens to any extent within the limits of his trust. That he labors at his post early and late. And that, in short, to his intelligence, industry, and promptitude, in the supervision of the Post Office, our citizens are indebted for its being conducted with greater efficiency, than it ever was at any period before he was appointed to it. It is likewise within their knowledge that the stories they have published against him were aspersions. Yet they do not contradict them. What, then, must that reader who is aware of all the facts of the case think of their candor?

Last week, a servant girl in this city, (Hereford,) attempted to poison herself, which was happily frustrated by the very commendable conduct of the assistant in a druggist’s shop, where the infatuated female applied to purchase a quantity of laudanum, under a pretext which led him to suppose her real object; fearful she would procure the fatal drug elsewhere if he refused to supply it, he gave her some tincture of bark, which the foolish girl swallowed as soon as she reached her master’s house, observing to her fellow-servant, she had taken that which would very shortly put her out of this world; the family were instantly apprised of the circumstance, and skilful medical assistance immediately procured, when an inquiry was very properly made at the druggist’s, and the poor girl soon learned the obligations she was under to the young man, whose discretion had probably saved her life.—For. Mis.

Inflation of the Lungs of Newly-born Infants.—At a recent sitting of the French Academy of Sciences, M. Julia Fontanelle stated a curious fact in confirmation of the usefulness of the practice of inflating the lungs of newly-born children apparently lifeless. An infant, born in a state of asphyxia, was brought, said the speaker, for dissection, to M. Portal;—it had already lain some time in the room, and the surgeon was about to commence the anatomy, but before proceeding to operate the thought occurred to him to blow in its mouth. This he accordingly did, and at the end of two or three minutes warmth returned, the circulation was excited, the heart beat, and the body was sent back to the parents—a living child.—Ib.

Henry the Eighth’s book against Luther.—In the Fitzwilliam Museum, Cambridge, is preserved a copy of Henry the Eighth’s book against Luther. Assertio Septem Sacramentorum adversus Martinum Lutherum, said to be the identical one that the author presented to the Pope. It was purchased at Rome by Mr Woodburn and by him presented to the University. This copy is signed by the royal hand, and stamped with the royal arms, and it was for this treatise Henry obtained from the Pope that title which his successors still retain, “fidei defensor.”—Defender of the Faith.—Ib.

A learned Goose.—Yesterday, Leicester-square was crowded to excess to witness the extraordinary and unparalleled sagacity of a goose, just imported from the Sicily Islands, which, out of the common course of nature, proved, that an animal, however stupid, can be brought to possess intelligence. Several ladies and gentlemen of distinction put divers curious and scientific questions to the goose, and they were answered by referring to a watch, the alphabet, multiplication table, dice, and cards. Instant and reason appear blended in the animal’s wonderful performances.—Ib.

The Duke.—A Man of Note.—“I perceive,” said Lord A. at the Athenæum the other day, “the Times states that the Earl of Mornington, the Duke of Wellington’s father, was a Doctor of Music in the University of Dublin.” “True,” replied Croker, “but not half such a man of note as his illustrious son!”

A second cemetery for the metropolis is now forming at Bayswater, near Kensington Gardens, London. It is to comprise 52 acres, to be beautifully laid out and planted, and to be ornamented with a chapel, “like the Holy Sepulchre at Jerusalem.” The cost is expected to be £81,000.

It is said that water actually costs more per gallon in Paris than the Wine with which the French Navy is supplied at Toulouse.

Young Glover, who shot a Mr Wiggins, under cruel circumstances, at Mobile, has broken jail and made his escape. $500 is offered for his apprehension.

U. S. SCHR. SHARK, MARSEILLES, 28TH MAY, 1834.

We started from this place on the 16th, leaving the Delaware, 74, and Constitution frigate there; but we are doomed to make an early return, by having run foul of the French steam vessel of war, “Rapid,” in what we considered a shamefully careless manner; or what is worse, intentionally. Had she designed the encounter, it could not have been done more effectually than it was, or more damage inflicted upon us. We had beaten out the Bay of Toulon, and were about doubling the Cape which forms the Bay, and this steamboat was going in; of course before the wind. She had therefore the choice, to pass astern of us, or if a contact was probable, to stop her wheels and let us pass sufficiently ahead to be entirely free of collision. The Rapid continued to approach us, and rapidly too; for she had full steam on, besides the power of the wind and sea forcing her towards us; and evinced a determination on the part of the Commander to pass ahead of us, of which when we were aware, it was too late to tack, because we would have luffed directly into his vessel, and given plausible appearances of intentional contact on our part. We therefore pursued the only course left, by keeping away, though on a lee shore, and were using our utmost endeavors to avoid her, when she finally struck us; carried away our flying jib boom, and rigging attached; then dropping astern, she struck our fore-chains, being thrown upon us by a heavy sea, and carried away the main rail, besides injuring the channels and altering the shape of our bulwarks there. With the next sea she was thrown upon our main-chains, and did nearly the same mischief there. What manifested mostly malicious intention on the part of the Commander of the steamboat, was his not stopping her wheels until after she struck; when he must have known a short time before the meeting, that such was inevitable. We made the best of our way back, and with the assistance of all the Delaware’s mechanics, we were soon refitted, and we finally got away on the afternoon of the 15th.—Correspondence Jour. Com.

Mahogany was known in England a long time since, but was not much used till within some fifty years.—The first importation to that country is said to have consisted of five planks sent to Dr Gibbons of London, by his brother in the West Indies. The Doctor gave it to his workmen, who were making a house for him, but they cast it aside for its hardness. He then ordered a candle box made of it, and then its beauty was first perceived. The Doctor had a bureau constructed of it, and the Duke of Buckingham another; and from this time mahogany became, what it has always since continued, the favorite species among all the fancy woods.—Ib.

Failures in Calcutta.—Some time since, we announced the failure of Crutenden & Co, the last of the British agency houses in Calcutta. A list of these failures, beginning with 1830, and excluding the house of Mercer & Co, who failed in 1827, (its outstanding obligations amounting to half a million pounds,) is given in the Asiatic Journal, for June, and shows their debts in London, and the debts of houses intimately connected with them, to have amounted in the aggregate, at the time of their failures, to within a fraction of TWENTY MILLIONS STERLING.—Ibid.

Morrison Apprehended.—Morrison, the person who was entrusted by the Cashier of the Newbury Bank (Vt) on the 14th ult, with $3,900, to be delivered to Messrs Emerson, Lamb & Harvey of this city, and who so unaccountably disappeared after having been seen in town and before the money was delivered, an account of which appeared in our paper of the 24th ult, has been arrested, in, or near Eastport, by the promptness of Messrs Emerson & Co, in distributing handbills and notices, and the vigilance of Messrs Hobbs and Granger of Eastport. He surrendered $3,037 80, and says that he lost $700 in Ann street; the rest he does not account for. He is in custody at Eastport, and will be brought to trial, by a letter of requisition from the Governor.—Trans.

Benjamin Burke, a soldier of the Revolution died in Upper Merion, Montgomery Co. (Pa.) a few days since, in his 92d year. He sacrificed all his property during the struggle of the Revolution, and served in several actions.

It is worthy of remark, that more than half a million of dollars have been collected for tolls, and that more flour, by twenty-five thousand barrels, has come down the Erie canal, than in the same period for 1833.—Penn.

A pretty little smiling boy-baby was left on the step of a house in Lafayette Place, New York. He was carried to the Alms-house, and named “Lafayette Place.”

Four persons were arrested at Richmond on Saturday evening last, under the ordinance to prevent gambling recently enacted by the corporation of that city.—They were to be tried before the Mayor’s Court on Monday last.

MARRIED.

In Nantucket, Valentine D. Holmes to Lydia, daughter of Capt Elihu Coffin.
In Barnstable, Charles C. Morton, of Nantucket, to Bethiah Ryder, of B.
In Ipswich Jail, Vermont, James Hiland to Martha M. Bailey. The bridegroom was under arrest for subornation of perjury, and the bride the only witness upon which the government relied to convict him. To checkmate the prosecution, the prisoner obtained the hand of the witness in marriage, he will fore trial, which renders her an incompetent witness against her husband, and he will probably slip through the fingers of justice.

CITY LAND OFFICE.

The Superintendent of the Public Lands will receive sealed proposals, for ten days, for removing earth from the Receiving Basin, by the square, sufficient to grade a new street, near N. Tuckerman's Land, called Grotton street; also, for the next street, called Hanson street; or so much of said streets as lie between Tremont and Suffolk streets. Each street to be eleven feet wide, and to be laid out on a true line from one to the other. Each street to be separate in the proposals. The earth to be taken from such part of the Basin as shall be designated by the Superintendent. The money to be paid about as fast as the work progresses, and the final amount to be adjusted by the survey of S. P. Fuller, Esq. after it shall have been levelled and settled.

ABNER BOURNE, Sup't. P. Lands, Office No. 70 State street.

NOTICE.—THE AMERICAN CORK COMPANY

beg leave to apprise the public that they have now on hand at MOSES MELLENS' Upholstery establishment, corner of Union and Ann streets, (up stairs), the PATENT CORK MATTRESS, double and single, in great variety, and at various prices, and will furnish to order any quantity or description. These Mattresses are recommended by the most scientific men in this country, as being very valuable. First, the life preserving qualities to sea-faring people are of immense value, as they will unquestionably be the means of saving life on many occasions, as a man floats with perfect safety on rough and boisterous seas. Secondly, it is a non-conductor of heat, conduction, or filth of any kind, and said to be the healthiest article that has been used to sleep upon, for warm climates and summer months. They are worthy the attention of those who desire to sleep cool in the sultry season of the year, as they are as cool in July as in January; they also will not matt or decay. The public are respectfully invited to call and examine the same, as above.
